this volume casts a new light on marsilio ficino an extraordinary renaissance man sometimes he has been thought of as an ivory tower philosopher who retired from the hurly burly of life to contemplate god in the seclusion of his academy it is true that he was a man of devotion but when the need was there he could be a highly effective man of action we see him using his significant influence in florence and beyond to defend his philosophy against opposition from the church in this he was successful the collected letters were first printed in venice in 1495 this may have been because the fundamentalist priest savonarola and the party opposed to the medici ficino s patrons were then powerful in florence lorenzo s son and heir piero had been expelled the previous year some material that would have been in this book on chronological grounds may also have been excluded for the same reason this material has been included here in the appendix together
