modern medicine has produced many wonderful technological breakthroughs that have extended the limits of the frail human body however much of the focus of this medical research has been on the physical often reducing the human being to a biological machine to be examined understood and controlled this book begins by asking whether the modern medical milieu has overly objectified the body unwittingly or not and whether current studies in bioethics are up to the task of restoring a fuller understanding of the human person in response various authors here suggest that a more theological religious approach would be helpful or perhaps even necessary presenting specific perspectives from judaism christianity and islam the book is divided into three parts understanding the body respecting the body and the body at the end of life a panel of expert contributors including philosophers physicians and theologians and scholars of religion answer key questions such as what is the relationship between body and soul what are our obligations toward human bodies how should medicine respond to suffering and death the resulting text is an interdisciplinary treatise on how medicine can best function in our societies offering a new way to approach the medical humanities this book will be of keen interest to any scholars with an interest in contemporary religious perspectives on medicine and the body
