the politics of empowerment of banyarwanda refugees in uganda 1959 2001 introduces empowerment discourse to the nexus between politics security and forced migration and refugees conceptualized as a group process where people who lack their share of valued resources strive to gain greater access to and control over those resources empowerment of banyarwanda refugees was possible through a protracted struggle the book explores how the banyarwanda refugees achieved reasonable levels of integration in ugandan society because of similar demographics social economic and cultural characteristics with the ugandan population in the areas they settled had the ugandan state not broken down in the late 1970s and 1980s these refugees would have perhaps acquired naturalization a veritable form of empowerment in contrast although most hutu and tutsi refugees achieved meaningful levels of integration as some were treated badly and abused with derogatory language their leaders and some of the elites never gave up the dream of returning home the book concludes that violent conflicts emerge because of a violation of human rights and denial of access to scarce resources and rwanda and africa as a whole must build institutions that allow popular participation in decision making transfer of political power from one group or generation to the other and generally to address the question of democracy and good governance

this provocative book develops empowerment theory in the context of community mediation schwerin uses a case study of a large urban community mediation program to explore the empowerment concept and to assess widely believed hypotheses about empowerment and community mediation the major contributions of this work to transformational politics and the community mediation movement include the development and elaboration of empowerment theory the analysis of mediation ideology mediation training and mediation process and the exploration of the linkage between community mediation and personal and social transformation
