this last century of the second millennium has compressed human history to such an extent that whole ages of engineering economics social politics and the humanities have been accommodated in decades or even years mankind has matured and applied its cognitive and creative genes to advance science and to internationalise future goals including the vital goal of sustainable social development however having no control over the new pace of history twentieth century civilisation has faced global cataclysms of a frequency and depth unprecedented and inconceivable in the past millennia among the recent crises to be resolved in the third millennium is disintegration of the soviet union the biggest state and third largest population in the world regrettably the pace of change in the soviet union had been slower than the rates of reform elsewhere attempts at economic redecorating instead of radical market oriented reforms failed in soviet society general discontent with the progress of perestroika in the 1980s provoked the child complacency syndrome that is typical of a young mind contemptuous of any adult action it is convinced that things could have been done much better and much quicker with the new millennium approaching the soviet union gave way to 15 new states ridden with both inherited and acquired economic political and social maladies it is common knowledge however that childhood epidemics are short lived while the demographic make up of some former soviet republics such as uzbekistan and turkmenistan allows for the use of ethno nationalism in the pursuit of legitimacy kazakhstan s ethnic makeup requires a more difficult process of developing civil society political penetration and patriotic loyalty amidst a population with highly divergent conceptions of personal identity and territorial belonging according to diener geography pepperdine u he examines the ways this process plays out in relation to the actions of the state towards the non titular german and korean communities of kazakhstan forcibly resettled there in the 1930s and 40s he analyzes their divergent reactions to the collapse of the soviet union and the possibility of reestablishing their ethnic identities in an effort to understand the relationship between place power and identity annotation 2004 book news inc portland or booknews com

this book examines the development of bilateral energy relations between china and the two oil rich countries kazakhstan and russia challenging conventional assumptions about energy politics and china s global quest for oil this book examines the interplay of politics and sociocultural contexts it shows how energy resources become ideas and how these ideas are mobilized in the realm of international relations china s relations with kazakhstan and russia are simultaneously enabled and constrained by the discursive politics of oil it is argued that to build collaborative and constructive energy relations with china its partners in kazakhstan russia and elsewhere must consider not only the material realities of china s energy industry and the institutional settings of china s energy policy but also the multiple symbolic meanings that energy resources and particularly oil acquire in china china s energy security and relations with petrostates offers a nuanced understanding of china s bilateral energy relations with kazakhstan and russia raising essential questions about the social logic of international energy politics it will appeal to students and scholars of international relations energy security chinese and post soviet studies along with researchers working in the fields of energy policy and environmental sustainability
